Brown’s Policy on Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment

Sexual Harassment is any unwelcome sexual advance, request for sexual favors, or other unwanted conduct of a sexual nature, whether verbal, non-verbal, graphic, physical, electronic, or otherwise, when one or more of the following conditions are present:

(i) Submission to or rejection of such conduct is either an explicit or implicit term or condition of, or is used as the basis for decisions affecting, an individual’s employment or advancement in employment, evaluation of academic work or advancement in an academic program, or basis for participation in any aspect of a Brown University program or activity (quid pro quo); and/or

(ii) Such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual’s learning, working, or living environment; in other words, it is sufficiently severe, pervasive, or persistent as to create an intimidating, hostile, or offensive learning, working, or living environment under both an objective and subjective standard (hostile environment).

Gender-Based Harassment includes harassment based on sex or gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression, which may include acts of intimidation or hostility, whether verbal or non-verbal, graphic, physical, or otherwise, even if the acts do not involve conduct of a sexual nature.

Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment Resource Guide for Graduate Students 2017-2018
Graduate Students and Sexual Harassment

The demands and pressures of graduate school can make addressing sexual and gender-based harassment seem especially challenging for graduate students. Relationships formed during graduate study are vital to students’ professional futures, and networks of expertise are often tight-knit. Professional ties are so important that students often fear that “rocking the boat” might negatively impact their future careers.

To address this concern, graduate students at Brown are not only protected by the sexual and gender-based harassment policy, but also by the University’s prohibition on retaliation. Under Brown’s policy, “maliciously and purposefully interfering with, threatening, or damaging the academic and/or professional career of another individual before, during or after the investigation and resolution of a report of Prohibited Conduct in response to and/or on account of the report of the Prohibited Conduct.”

If you have experienced or witnessed an event that is making it difficult for you to continue your training, research, or teaching at Brown, there are a number of university resources to assist you in figuring out a course of action that will preserve your academic and professional goals.

Resources to help you understand your options:

These individuals can both help you understand your options and work with you in making a complaint. Each individual is responsible for certain groups within the university, but all are equally equipped to assist you. It is your choice whom to contact. These resources are not confidential.
